Commentary

The K2 Global High Alpha Fund returned 6.70% for the month.

The investing climate in Australia is improving. The headline inflation rate has almost halved since the end of 2022 and further declines should be expected over the coming months. Food prices have been declining, petrol prices have fallen and wholesale electricity prices have collapsed. As a result, the Reserve Bank of Australia (RBA) should be able to move to the sidelines. An improved interest rate outlook has supported the Australian housing market with residential property prices having risen now for ten consecutive months. The Australian share market also moved 12% higher over the past two months. Notwithstanding these asset price moves, consumer and business confidence in Australia has remained at uncharacteristically subdued levels. We would anticipate that the animal spirits of the Australian consumer and business leaders will be rekindled in 2024 and this should be beneficial for businesses such as Macquarie Group (MQG).

MQG generated more than $10 billion of revenue from Australian external customers in 2023 and this has grown by close to 7%pa over the past two decades. In addition, MQG has more than 10,000 staff located in Australia. MQG's international operations have grown substantially faster than the local franchise however, Australia provides an important growth engine for the group. MQG's Banking and Financial Services (BFS) division has built a loan portfolio of $134 billion; these are predominantly Australian home and business loans and have grown by almost 20%pa over the last ten years. MQG has also expanded its Australian investment platform business to $125 billion and is now the 4th largest player in the market with a share of 12.7%. BFS is therefore highly leveraged to an improved desire for Australian's to embrace risk assets.

MQG is also favourably exposed to the recovery in global investors' appetite for risk. Investors are increasingly conditioning themselves for an interest rate turning point in 2024 and this would enable MQG to conclude a number of transactions that are in the pipeline. MQG has tended to generate more performance fees during the phase following a peak in interest rates. It is also not lost on us that peer global alternative asset managers like Blackstone Inc and Brookfield Asset Management have seen their share prices outperform MQG's by more than 20% over the past six months are now both trading on 25x next years' expected profit; ten PE points more than MQG.
