Commentary

The Select International Alpha Fund returned +0.34% for the month and +18.3% financial-year-to-date (FYTD). The fund is up +24.0% over the past year (net, after fees).

Investor confidence has been building year-to-date as the non-recession scenario for the US becomes the consensus view. The resilient economic data, compared to expectation, remains supportive for risk assets as the rally for equities and credit spreads confirms. We anticipate that the US Fed and other key developed market central banks will cut later than consensus expectations. This more hawkish view is aligned with some Fed commentary and reinforced by the better than anticipated economic momentum in the US. This allows the market to tolerate higher US bond yields which are partly reflecting improved operating conditions.

When the rates cuts do occur by the key developed markets, there may be a strong synchronisation of monetary stimulus. Therefore, the degree of rate cuts could be less than some may be hoping for. Further, the stubbornness of services inflation remains too risky for central bankers to drive aggressive rate cuts early. Holding off as long as possible until the data turns is more prudent when targeting price stability.

Unlike the key developed economies, the outlook for China remains problematic for investors. Both consumer and business sentiment remain weak as their economy continues to recover from the significant property sector construction collapse. The market continues to be underwhelmed by the policy response. More aggressive and coordinated monetary and fiscal policy stimulus is required by the world's second largest economy.

There are some risks including geo-political (difficult to predict), additional government debt issuance supply and elections. Further, valuations at the current stage of the cycle are not cheap compared to historical benchmarks. The rally has simply reflected the improved economic, earnings and credit conditions compared to expectations.

The global Fund overweights to quality Tech (including AI and cloud) have been key contributors to the performance. Overweights include Microsoft (MSFT), Amazon (AMZN), NVIDIA (NVDA), Intuitive Surgical (ISRG), Alphabet (GOOG), Meta (META), Dell Technologies (DELL), Uber Technologies (UBER) and Netflix (NFLX). The Fund is unhedged vs the USD and remains underweight vs benchmark Consumer Discretionary, Financials and Commercial Real Estate.
