Commentary

The Select International Alpha Fund returned +1.32% for the month, +19.9% financial-year-to-date (FYTD) and up +23.0% over the past year (net, after fees). The fund is now up +36.9% since the new managers led by London based Mark Hawtin and his team started managing the fund in January 2023. The strong performance of the fund has come from both stock and sector selection.

Currently, global economic conditions and the outlook remain reasonable despite challenges including geo-political headlines weighing on investor sentiment. There is an unevenness of data by region and across sectors however economic conditions are resilient vs expectations. Despite the strong performance of equities, credit and residential housing in the US, the strong wealth effects have not transitioned into strong household and business sentiment. However, corporate America and households remain relatively more confident compared to other key economies. The upcoming US quarterly earnings in April will give some additional context.

The restrictive Fed Funds rate has been at odds with the resilient economic momentum and expanding profits. The US labour market remains tight reflecting the stimulatory US fiscal spend and strong migration. This has also put pressure on core US CPI as the past three months have seen a re-acceleration. There is some nuance to the way the Fed will interpret the data. While inflation is broadly slowing the recent re-acceleration and strong employment suggests it is difficult to make the case for US rate cuts anytime soon. Higher for longer rates can be absorbed in part by the stronger performing economy. The interpretation of appropriate valuations will therefore dictate the degree of market volatility. The second largest economy, China continues to go down the path of stimulatory monetary policy to deal with the property construction collapse. The signs of deflation give the PBoC plenty of scope deliver more accommodative interest rate settings, unlike other key developed economies. The PBoC have also been accumulating larger gold reserves over the past year and the trend looks to continue.

The Global Fund overweights to quality Tech (including AI and cloud) have been key contributors to the performance. Overweights include Microsoft (MSFT), Amazon (AMZN), NVIDIA (NVDA), Intuitive Surgical (ISRG), Alphabet (GOOG), Meta (META), Uber Technologies (UBER) and Netflix (NFLX). The Fund is unhedged vs the USD and remains underweight vs benchmark Consumer Discretionary, Financials and Commercial Real Estate.
